

Early Development Instrument:

English and French Immersion program teachers in HRCE schools are completing an Early Development Instrument (EDI) for each Primary student in their class during February, March, or April (17th). This work contributes to a partnership between the Department of Education and Early Childhood Development, Regional centres, and McMaster University. Primary teachers will complete questionnaires on the developmental health of their students. The resulting reports provide an important insight into children's early developmental experiences and how best to support and enhance them – we know that they have a lasting and long-term impact on education, behaviour, and health outcomes.
